

Monthly Review

The fund will have a tactical attitude, since our market timing models suggest probable discontinuities in performance in the main world markets throughout the year. After an encouraging start to the year, in partial recovery of the recent declines, a negative phase might follow between Spring and Summer, when we see materializing uncertainty over future corporate profits.

If no recessions were to materialize in G7 countries - as we deem as probable - the final part of 2019 will likely be positive, and favour the equity component of portfolios. The reference market for our allocation (equity and fixed income), remains the US, where we are holding an exposure to the dollar of around 10% - due to the extra yield offered. We might increase the exposure to the US$ if our models were to signal it. In a "contrarian" way, we appreciate that almost all global analysts are currently positive on the EURUSD rate, in our opinion with clashing views on fundamentals.
