

Monthly Review

Despite the new trade tensions between the USA and China, our base assumption is Donald Trump needs to sign a trade agreement before the 2020 presidential elections and he will likely succeed to do that. The uncertainty is on the timing of the agreement and if it will be a satisfactory one, bringing long-term stability in the bilateral relations between the two countries. Market volatility is destined to stay at least for the next weeks or months. We are a bit worried about the concomitance of the economic slowdown in Europe, the presence of negative interest rates and the looming parliamentary elections, nonetheless, in light of the new dovish ECB stance, we reduced the under-exposure to the European equity markets.

The US represents the reference market for both our equity and fixed income portions of the portfolio, and we keep favouring corporate bonds with maturities within 24 months. Additionally, we are adding exposure to selected Chinese companies active in a combination of tech and consumer staples businesses.

Our equity exposure currently fluctuates around neutrality (50%), up from an average of 25-30% during the second half of 2018. Although we do not exclude the possibility to reduce it in the second quarter, we maintain a constructive view on equity returns for the end of 2019.
