

Monthly Review

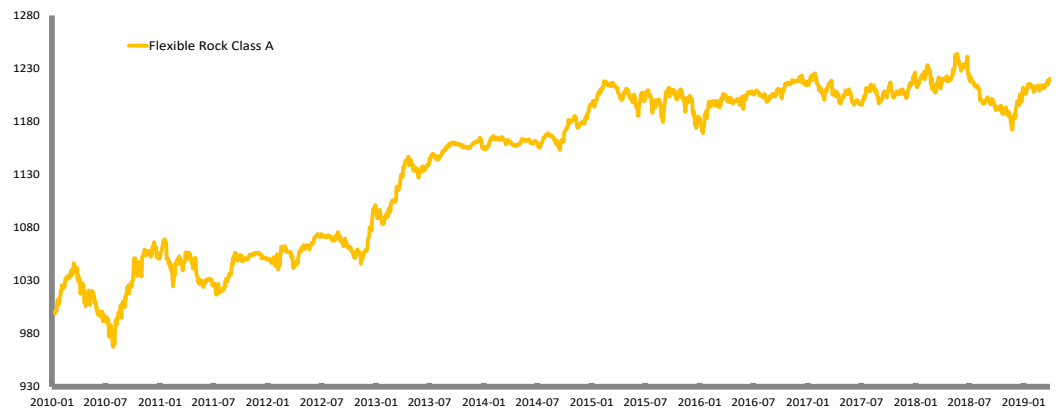

The fund has managed with a tactical attitude, as our market-timing models suggest probable performance discontinuities in major markets throughout the year. After the impressive start for the equity markets, the current negative phase occurred a bit earlier than we expected, still our team was timely in reducing and maintaining the equity exposure well below 20%. If the trade war will not evolve and no recession is to materialize in G7 countries - as we deem as probable - the final part of 2019 will likely be positive, and favour the equity component of portfolios.

The reference market for our allocation (equity and fixed income), remains the US, where we are holding an exposure to the dollar of around 10% – due to the extra yield offered. In a "contrarian" way, we appreciate that almost all global analysts were positive on the EURO vs the US Dollar at the beginning of 2019, in our opinion with clashing views on fundamentals. Additionally, we are adding exposure to selected Chinese companies active either in tech or consumer staples businesses.
