

Monthly Review

The fund has managed with a tactical attitude, as our market-timing models suggest probable performance discontinuities in major markets throughout the year. After the impressive start for the equity markets, the current negative phase occurred a bit earlier than we expected, still our team was timely in reducing and maintaining the equity exposure well below 20%. If the trade war will not evolve and no recession is to materialize in G7 countries - as we deem as probable - the final part of 2019 will likely be positive, and favour the equity component of portfolios. We will maintain a cautious stance in the second and third quarters looking for adding equity risk in the final part of the year. The reference market for our allocation (equity and fixed income), remains the US, even if we have reduced the dollar exposure to around 3% of the NAV in the 1.1140-1.1240 area. The FED softer stance, coupled with increasing trade tensions, suggest us to maintain a neutral stance on currencies. In a "contrarian" way, we appreciate that almost all global analysts were positive on the EURO vs the US Dollar at the beginning of 2019, but our models have now turned neutral and we have acted accordingly.
