

Monthly Review

The Fund continues being under-exposed on the Emerging Markets equities, as we still considering EM unattractive in light of risks of a global slowdown in 2019. The only exception is China, where we are equal-weight vs benchmark through a combination of active and passive strategies. Despite the new trade tensions between the USA and China, our base assumption is Donald Trump needs to sign a trade agreement before the 2020 presidential elections and he will likely succeed to do that. The uncertainty is on the timing of the agreement and if it will be a satisfactory one, bringing long-term stability in the bilateral relations between the two countries. Market volatility is destined to stay at least for the next weeks or months.

Central Bankers have reassured markets on inflation outlook, the FED is currently on hold on interest rates and the ECB is trying to provide new monetary support to European weakening economies. We are not worried on the short term but we are not too dovish on core inflation rates around the world in the medium to long run, as there are many instances of tight labour market capacity coupled with increasing minimum wages.

Given the ECB stance, we have reduced our overweight on the US, keeping a balanced portfolio in terms of Value and Growth stocks.

Investment Strategy

The investment Policy of the Fund is aimed to produce medium-term capital appreciation. The Fund Manager uses a wide spectrum of techniques to select the most performing companies and obtain the best allocation among markets and asset classes.

At all times, the Fund maintains an equity exposure lower than 60% of its net assets. The Fund invests primarily in equities listed in the American, European and Asian core markets. The Fund can diversify up to 49% of NAV in equities listed in emerging markets, up to 100% of NAV in investment-grade government and corporate bonds and up to 40% of NAV in sub-investment-grade government and corporate bonds. All the investments are realized in accordance with UCITS standards.

The Management Company

Woodpecker Capital Asset Management is a privately owned-independent company based in Luxembourg.
