

Monthly Review

The trade tensions between the USA and China are still on the way, and based on recent developments we are increasingly of the opinion that a full resolution before the US 2020 elections is all but sure. China reinstated its policy of opening to foreign capital inflows, they also tried to reply to the US with tax levies on imported goods, two signs that they are not willing to settle at every cost with the US. The US in turn are backing HK protesters, which is not a good sign in terms of a full agreement between the parties. Central Bankers are now on hold, and there are increasing worries on a possible economic global slowdown for the months to come, possibly a global recession well into 2020. Our base scenario is that global equities will remain well supported up until the end of 2019 by a mix of still decent global growth and by monetary stimulus. We are becoming very cautious for the first 9 months of 2020 when a series of negative factors (mainly a pronounced global slowdown, prolonged trade tensions, the US elections) could result in equities corrections of a 10-20% scale. The US represents the reference market for both our equity and fixed income portions of the portfolio, and we keep favouring corporate bonds with maturities within 24 months. Our equity exposure currently fluctuates around neutrality (50%), up from an average of 25-30% during the second half of 2018. We do not exclude the possibility to reduce the equity exposure aggressively toward the end of 2019.
